This paper is about how non-Indigenous and Indigenous owned mining companies can make a difference in remote and regional Indigenous communities by building the transport, business and housing infrastructure capacity of Indigenous communities through targeted 100 per cent tax deductible donations of cash, equipment and services. This strategy has many benefits. It can be a means of supporting Aboriginal contractors to build an independent business asset base and capacity, increasing the self sufficiency of Indigenous communities and reducing the high cost of living in mining regions.

Reducing the High Costs of Transport in Indigenous Communities

In 2010 the ISX, in honour of its deep roots in Broome, agreed to think hard about the question of the high cost of transport and vehicles for remote and regional Aboriginal communities throughout Australia. Broome's Aboriginal taxi drivers were legendary, pioneer business-people who directly benefited the community and led to lower costs of transport for Aboriginal people. They were also the heart and soul of the community and were problem solvers and unofficial community guardians.

Today in many remote communities it can cost as much as $A450 for a single one-way trip to a supermarket to purchase food for a community. There are no buses and most communities have to add these costs on to the already very highly inflated prices of food and sustenance. For many Aboriginal people wanting to work at a normal weekly job the very high costs of transport is also a major prohibition. The cost of vehicles is extremely high in remote areas and the quality of the vehicles is very poor. It is not unusual for Aboriginal people to pay three times the price of a vehicle in urban areas and the vehicle is usually in very poor condition and lasts only a short time. Aboriginal businesses bidding for mining and civil works contracts are also unable to compete because of the high cost of transport and equipment.

The ISX will broaden the awareness of a range of civil works and mining companies who regularly have to reduce redundant inventory or upgrade their fleet. The ISX will illuminate companies about the tax effective merits of donating the vehicle or equipment to an Aboriginal organisation. Where necessary the ISX will take direct action to support the exchange. The ISX's parent company, the Broome Aboriginal Media Association, is a listed public benevolent institution with deductible gift recipient status. If there is no eligible DGR organisation available, BAMA will accept the gift in conformance with Australian Tax Office requirements to support a transport related project listed on the ISX trading floor. BAMA will then in turn make the vehicle available to the listed individual or business for a nominal return. The priority will be to allocate transport infrastructure to Aboriginal people or enterprises who will use the vehicle or equipment to create a business that will reduce the cost of living for the community. It will be up to the individuals and enterprises involved to maintain and run the vehicle sensibly. The ISX will require beneficiaries to make a short report over a nominated time frame on the use and maintenance of the vehicle. It will also encourage recipients to develop a long term vehicle maintenance and replacement strategy that will begin with the donated first asset.

It is planned to trial this plan in the Kimberley, the Pilbara and Arnhem Land in the first instance. However any Aboriginal organisation or person is eligible to make a listing on the ISX trading floor and take advantage of the ISX campaign.

Giving Indigenous Contractors Access to Plant and Capital Equipment

In many cases private businesses start up with only their owners resources and equipment. Many successful businesses never go near a stock exchange or an equity investor. Many successful business owners regard loans, equity partners and public listing as things to be avoided. However, Indigenous Australians have only had two generations to build up capital and resources is a major consideration. In a poignant moment at an ISX/NAB lunch in 2008 the ISX Inaugural Chairman Gerhardt Pearson told the guests that his father had to write to the Protector of Aborigines in Queensland to withdraw funds from his bank account.

In 2010 the ISX is working to fast track assets and resources for young Indigenous entrepreneurs keen to become independent contractors in their own right.

The ISX will broaden the awareness of a range of civil works and mining companies who regularly have to reduce redundant inventory or upgrade their fleet. The ISX will illuminate companies about the tax effective merits of donating plant to a potential Indigenous contractor. Where necessary the ISX will take direct action to support the exchange. The ISX's parent company, the Broome Aboriginal Media Association is a listed public benevolent institution with deductible gift recipient status. If the young entrepreneur lists his or her needs on the ISX trading floor, can demonstrate that his business will be of social and economic benefit to the Indigenous community, and there is no relevant local DGR organisation available, BAMA will accept the gift in conformance with Australian Tax Office requirements. BAMA will then in turn make the capital equipment available to the listed individual or business for a nominal return. The priority will be to allocate plant to Aboriginal people or enterprises who will use the vehicle or equipment as an independent contractor. It will be up to the contractor to maintain the equipment. The ISX will require beneficiaries to make a short report over a nominated time frame on the use and maintenance of the equipment. It will also encourage recipients to develop a long term asset maintenance and replacement strategy that will begin with the donated first asset.

It is planned to trial this plan in the Kimberley, the Pilbara and Arnhem Land in the first instance. However any Aboriginal organisation or person is eligible to make a listing on the ISX trading floor and take advantage of the ISX campaign.

Supporting Indigenous Business Hubs and Office Spaces in High Rent Mining Towns

It comes as a surprise to many urban Australians that the cost of office space and housing in remote mining towns matches the prices of rents on High St in Australian cities. Not only are rents extremely high but there are major shortages of space. It is almost impossible for Indigenous entrepreneurs to find affordable spaces in commercial hubs.

In 2010 the ISX is working to encourage Australian mining companies who have large numbers of redundant dongas to make them available for commercial hubs and office space. The above is a picture of how demountable housing was adapted for refugees on Christmas Island. The ISX believes that similar innovations should be common place for Indigenous business development.

The ISX will broaden the awareness of a range of civil works and mining companies who regularly have to vacate and sell large numbers of demountable houses. The ISX will illuminate companies about the tax effective merits of donating dongas to a Indigenous cultural and commercial businesses. Where necessary the ISX will take direct action to support the exchange. The ISX's parent company, the Broome Aboriginal Media Association is a listed public benevolent institution with deductible gift recipient status. If a business or individual makes a listing for commercial space on the ISX trading floor, can demonstrate that his business will be of social and economic benefit to the Indigenous community, and there is no relevant local DGR organisation available, BAMA will encourage companies to make a donations of demountable housing in conformance with Australian Tax Office requirements. BAMA will then in turn make the demountable available to the listed individual or business for a nominal return. The priority will be to allocate demountable space to Aboriginal people or enterprises who can demonstrate that they will benefit from the space. It will be up to the beneficiary to maintain the space. The ISX will require beneficiaries to make a short report over a nominated time frame on the use and maintenance of the demountable. It will also encourage recipients to develop a long term office maintenance and replacement strategy that will begin with the donated first asset.

It is planned to trial this plan in the Kimberley, the Pilbara and Arnhem Land in the first instance. However any Aboriginal organisation or person is eligible to make a listing on the ISX trading floor and take advantage of the ISX campaign.

Supporting the Capacity of Indigenous Homelands and Stations

Contrary to the direction of government policy, Indigenous homelands are not going to go away. The question is whether the capacity to maintain and develop them can be developed in the next generations of remote Aboriginal young people. The ISX and Ngarda Civil and Mining have already demonstrated that the only thing stopping Aboriginal young people is lack of opportunities. Homelands and stations were the training ground for the industrious Indigenous men and women of the 1940s and 1950s who are now the back bone of many Australian mining companies.

In 2010 the ISX is working to encourage Australian mining companies to make donations to the next generation homelands communities like the Pilbara's Yandeyarra station where this picture was taken some years ago. The ISX will illuminate companies about the tax effective merits of donating heavy plant and equipment to communities with DGR status like Yandeyarra. The ISX's parent company, the Broome Aboriginal Media Association is a listed public benevolent institution with deductible gift recipient status. If a homeland or community can demonstrate that they can maintain and utilise plant and equipment and there is no relevant local DGR organisation available, BAMA will encourage companies to make a donations of plant and equipment in conformance with Australian Tax Office requirements. BAMA will then in turn make the heavy plant and equipment available to the community concerned. The priority will be to allocate heavy plant and equipment to Aboriginal people or enterprises who can demonstrate that they have the capacity to maintain and utilise the equipment. It will be up to the beneficiary to maintain the plant and equipment. The ISX will require beneficiaries to make a short report over a nominated time frame on the use and maintenance of the heavy plant and equipment. It will also encourage homelands to develop a long term office maintenance and replacement strategy for its plant that will begin with the donated first asset.

It is planned to trial this plan in the Pilbara, the Kimberley and Arnhem Land in the first instance. However any Aboriginal organisation or person is eligible to make a listing on the ISX trading floor and take advantage of the ISX campaign.

THE BRITISH ALUMINIUM COMPANY LIMITED.
Mineral House,
Angel Place,
SYDNEY.
27th April, 1956.

The Hon. Howard Bule, Q.C.,
Minister for Supply,
Commonwealth Bank Building,
Martin Place,
SYDNEY, N.S.W.

Dear Mr. Minister,

Following the talks which our Deputy Chairman, Mr. Geoffrey Ouliffe, had with you in Australia recently, we now write under instructions from our Board of Directors to ask for the grant to us of mining rights over bauxite deposits in the Northern Territory so that a study can be made relating to the manufacture in Australia of alumina from these bauxite deposits in order to establish whether the production of alumina is economically sound and feasible from the point of view of markets and other relevant considerations.

Such a detailed study might take two years, and if successful, would involve an investment of not less than £2.20 million should a factory be established to produce approximately 300,000 tons of alumina per annum. We wish to commence detailed study at the earliest possible moment, but as substantial expense would be involved, we ask therefore for the prior grant by the Commonwealth Government of such mining rights. We also request prospecting rights for bauxite over additional areas in the Northern Territory to be negotiated.

We are prepared to form an Australian company and to provide the necessary finance to carry out the detailed study which is essential. Either this 'study' company or another established in Australia would be the producing company.

In the event of conditions being found to be favourable, we would expect to build a works for the conversion of bauxite into alumina either in close proximity to the bauxite deposits located in Arnhem Land or, alternatively, if certain requisites are not available there, then on the North-East coast of the mainland. The alumina would be exported from Australia either for use in our own aluminium smelters and/or to other suitably located producing interests, probably on the West coast of Canada and the U.S.A. The value of the annual exports from a plant of the capacity mentioned would be of the order of £2.10 million.

If found desirable, supplies of alumina to the Bell Bay smelter could be arranged. The export of alumina could lead to an arrangement under which Australia's requirements of aluminium ingot over and above the Bell Bay production would be assured.

The proposed alumina factory could be expanded to supply alumina to an aluminium smelter in Papua. The availability of alumina relatively close to a Papuan smelter would be a considerable advantage.

Application for mining rights to the bauxite deposits located on the Dove Peninsula in Arnhem Land was made in October last to the Administrator of the Northern Territory by the New Guinea Resources Prospecting Company Limited, of which the Commonwealth Government and we are shareholders to the extent of 5% and 49% respectively. We understand it is not envisaged that this prospecting company would exploit the deposit and we therefore suggest that the grant of those

2/mining

It is thought to be completely out of left field for mining companies to support cultural business on homelands. Yet in the original lobbying for access to mineral deposits such as the bauxite deposit at Yirrkala all sorts of promises were made in relation to the housing and development of the Indigenous community in order to be able to access Indigenous land.

In 2010 the ISX is working to encourage Australian mining companies to make donations of demountable housing to support cultural business and capital equipment on Indigenous homelands. The ISX will illuminate companies about the tax effective merits of donating demountable housing to cultural enterprises like Ripangu Yidaki which seeks to develop a traditional knowledge university on its homelands at Gikal. The ISX's parent company, the Broome Aboriginal Media Association is a listed public benevolent institution with deductible gift recipient status. If a homeland or community can demonstrate that they have a solid scope of works and have a demonstrable enterprise with a solid income stream, BAMA will encourage companies to make a donations of demountable plant and equipment in conformance with Australian Tax Office requirements. BAMA will then in turn make the demountable housing available to the community concerned. The priority will be to allocate demountable housing and equipment to Aboriginal people or enterprises with solid enterprises. It will be up to the beneficiary to maintain the demountable housing and plant and equipment. The ISX will require beneficiaries to make a short report over a nominated time frame on the use and maintenance of the demountable housing. It will also encourage homelands to develop a long term office maintenance and replacement strategy for its housing and plant that will begin with the donated first asset.

It is planned to trial this plan in Arnhem Land, Pilbara, the Kimberley and the Pilbara in the first instance. However any Aboriginal organisation or person is eligible to make a listing on the ISX trading floor and take advantage of the ISX campaign.

Meat and Potatoes Business IT Package

From Australian Invasion Day 2010 the ISX will offer a “meat and potatoes IT business package” to any Aboriginal business that lists on the ISX trading floor. The package will include:

- a) Online services and server storage for $150 per annum which is about half the market rate
- b) free website software - configured and installed
- c) free blog software - configured and installed
- c) email based marketing and client support system
- d) Fax to email and email to fax service available at a discounted price plus access to a range of IT professionals who offer the best business software and solutions available to small, medium and large businesses.

This will enable Indigenous business anywhere in Australia to make use of high level internet and telecommunications services and continues the ISX’s reputation for technical innovation.

Keypoints

1. The ISX was formed in 2003 with the objective of creating 1000 new Aboriginal businesses by 2009. It was soon realised that the ISX could not directly create businesses itself. Its role was to support the development of Indigenous business. Between 2003-2009 the ISX has supported the development of 5212 Indigenous businesses – some new and some mature – including several in the mining sector. Out goal has been to support a strong, creative and independent Aboriginal “private sector”. This more than any other single initiative was seen by the founders of the ISX to be a major contributor to the future life chances and choices of Aboriginal young people.
2. ASIC quickly contacted the ISX in its first year of activities noting that the term “stock exchange” was a prescribed term in Australian corporate law. The ISX reached an agreement with ASIC. Part of the agreement was to post recommended wording on its website and all relevant correspondence: “The ISX is not a financial market and does not sell or trade financial products of any kind”. Apart from ASIC’s helpful advice it was recognised that a conventional stock exchange was not what was needed at this cycle of Australian Aboriginal economic development. The Australian Stock Exchange or ASX was the appropriate forum for mature Indigenous businesses seeking to raise equity capital. But the primary need across the country was support for all of the dimensions of the business start-up process particularly for micro businesses. It was also recognised that the Indigenous economy and society might require innovations in equity raising and ownership structures, and that as these problems were relatively novel, they needed to be thoroughly discussed, thought about and developed over time. The ISX therefore was not, and might not ever be, a conventional stock exchange. An important part of the initial role of the ISX was to support the formation of new micro-business sector for Indigenous Australia. As time went on the ISX recognised that supporting the development of innovative corporate forms like the Aboriginal corporation (pioneered by Charles Rowley in 1976) was also critical.
3. The first forum held by the ISX was the Ngunawal Trading Floor (Canberra) on May 21 2003 which saw 30 Aboriginal enterprises present cases for investment. Then followed a series of “community trading floors”: the Kuku Yalanji Trading Floor (Mossman North Queensland) on 20 August 2003, the Yawuru Trading Floor (Broome, WA) on 19 May 2004, the Yorta Yorta Trading Floor on Nov 24 2004 and the Ngarda Trading Floor at Roebourne on 21 June 2006. From the Kuku Yalanji trading floor onwards these forums involved sophisticated use of the internet as well as data-casting, ISDN presentations and satellite presentations from Aboriginal community sites to downtown financial districts in Sydney, London, Brisbane, Melbourne and Canberra. The ISX was recognised for its innovation. It received a B2B Business Award in Melbourne in 2003, was admitted as a laureate of Silicon Valleys Tech Museum in 2004 and was a finalist for the Stockholm Prize in 2006.
4. However despite its technological innovation there were problems with the community trading floor process. It was expensive costing between $40,000 and $60,000 to run a community trading floor not including the many hundreds of manpower hours donated by volunteers. Though the ISX prides itself on ensuring that even its running expenses go to Aboriginal organisations, one of the concerns was that a lot of energy was being devoted to hosting trading floors and not enough effort was being devoted to actually winning resources for start-up Indigenous enterprises themselves. What if the funding for community trading floors could be raised and directed directly to Indigenous enterprises?

5. From 2007 energy was directed to creating a virtual national trading floor on the web through the www.isx.org.au site. ISX volunteers would still focus on geographical regions but the emphasis would go into the actual presentations of the businesses and in trying to identify mentors, supporters and investors. A mailing list of over 5000 supporters of Indigenous business was developed. Each enterprise that was listed on the virtual trading floor would be spotlighted to the 5000 supporters. The ISX website soon became the most substantial Australian economic development website available to Indigenous business people. It has become a major hub with a quarter of million internet visits on average each month. The website's news and policy sections, employment, products and trading floor sections are of great importance to the site's continuing popularity. The ISX view is that continuing to boost the popularity of the website helps attract supporters, mentors and investors in new Indigenous businesses. The view is that the central website has been a success and that it is the best and most cost effective way of promoting Aboriginal business. Unlike the array of government Indigenous business units which tend to create a patronising and protective process of information sharing, the ISX process is open, transparent and is able to be updated at any time. The ISX business register is a permanent record of the successes, problems and failures of Aboriginal businesses.
6. Becoming a trusted forum for investors takes time. However, there are pressing imperatives for Indigenous Australian communities. These two factors: patience and urgency, are incompatible and have created some tensions in the work of the ISX. The tipping point in our thinking came with the realisation that for many young Indigenous Australians private sector action and opportunities, particularly in remote and regional Australia, are needed immediately. Even five years, a very short period of time in the scale of business planning and development, is too long.
7. From 2009-2015 the ISX is focusing on direct action to support Indigenous businesses. Over the past five years the ISX has worked with banks, large companies, superannuation funds and individual investors to find investment and support for start up Indigenous businesses. From the start it has been understood that business is business. It would do no-one any favours if tried and true business and investment processes were ignored. As in the normal commercial process, many projects and enterprises have been un-successful in attracting investment and support. This is the way the market works and it's a necessary way for investors to determine whether or not to risk their funds. The ISX does not think that lack of success in attracting investment or capital is a bad thing. In many cases it is a very useful learning experience. However, the private sector is a much wider entity than businesses and enterprises who seek private equity and the business development process is also much more diverse than that associated with loans and equity. In many cases private businesses start up with only their owners resources and equipment. Many successful businesses never go near a stock exchange or an equity investor. Just as many business owners regard banks, equity partners and public listing as things to be avoided. But the fact that Indigenous Australians have only had two generations to build up capital and resources is a major consideration. In a poignant moment at an ISX/NAB lunch in 2008 Gerhard Pearson told the guests that his father had to write to the Protector of Aborigines in Queensland to withdraw funds from his bank account.
8. In supporting Indigenous businesses in early 21st century Australia certain realities have to be recognised. While it is untrue to suggest there are no commercial traditions in traditional Indigenous Australia, since European colonisation the traditional capabilities and the ability of Indigenous Australians to operate in the mainstream economy have been suppressed. Until 1967 many Indigenous Australians were not allowed to build up their own capital, own their businesses, trade in the mainstream market place or even to work in the mainstream economy. The extraordinary capabilities and capacities of Indigenous Australians have always been in evidence but the tools, capacity and rights that mainstream Australians have taken for granted for two hundred years were denied Aboriginal Australians.

9. The demography of Indigenous Australians must also be taken into account. While the biggest aggregate number of Aboriginal Australians live in urban areas, two thirds of Aboriginal Australians live in regional and remote Australia. Regional and remote areas have their own special considerations and limitations. In many cases the sacred homelands of Indigenous communities require substantial investments. It is the ISX view that these homelands are amongst the most important assets of the nation and that contrary to current Federal, State and Territory policy these places are the seeds for an Indigenous social, cultural and economic renaissance.
10. The major priorities for supporting Indigenous business that the ISX sees in 2010 are:

* supporting 1000 self starting and developing Aboriginal businesses with low cost business IT packages

From Australian Invasion Day 2010 the ISX will offer a “meat and potatoes IT business package” to any Aboriginal business that lists on the ISX trading floor. The package will include:

- a) Online services and server storage for $150 per annum which is about half the market rate
- b) free website software - configured and installed
- c) free blog software - configured and installed
- c) Email based marketing and client support system
- d) Fax to email and email to fax service available at a discounted price plus access to a range of IT professionals who offer the best business software and solutions available to small, medium and large businesses.

* supporting the donation of capital equipment and infrastructure to start up and developing Indigenous businesses

*supporting the donation of equipment and infrastructure which will improve the competitiveness of remote and regional businesses and communities

The ISX sees the Deductible Gift Recipient as a major means for private and corporate individuals to take direct measures that will be of benefit to start up and developing Indigenous businesses. We have tested the process with large and small companies and it is expected that great results can be achieved over the next five years.

Here are a couple of case studies of how the process can work:

An Individual

In 2006–07, Rochelle donates a vehicle to a DGR. The vehicle is valued by the Commissioner at $7,000. Rochelle decides to spread the deduction over the five income years available for the apportionment. The first income year in which she can claim a portion of the deduction is 2006–07. Rochelle decides to apportion her deduction for the donation of the vehicle as follows:

2007	2008	2009	2010	2011
10%	30%	20%	20%	20%

She makes a written record of the election before lodging her 2006-7 tax return.

<http://www.ato.gov.au/nonprofit/content.asp?doc=/content/34496.htm&page=5&H5>

A Company: Vehicles and Heavy Equipment

In 2006–07, a mining company decides to bypass the normal auction process for its redundant vehicles and heavy equipment. It donates the equipment to a DGR. The equipment is valued by the Commissioner at $250,000. The company decides to spread the deduction over the five income years available for the apportionment. The first income year in which the company can claim a portion of the deduction is 2006–07. The company decides to apportion its deduction as follows:

2007	2008	2009	2010	2011
0%	0%	30%	35%	35%

The company makes a written record of the election before lodging its 2006-7 tax return. In 2008 the company decides to change the schedule of deductions. It does this by making a variation on an approved form before lodging the first tax return to which the variation applies.

A Further Company Example: Dongas

In 2009–10, a mining company decides to bypass the normal auction process for its redundant dongas. It donates the dongas to a DGR. The equipment is valued by the Commissioner at $750,000. The company decides to spread the deduction over the five income years available for the apportionment. The first income year in which the company can claim a portion of the deduction is 2009–10. The company decides to apportion its deduction as follows:

2009	2010	2011	2012	2013
5%	5%	30%	30%	30%

The company makes a written record of the election before lodging its 2006-7 tax return. In 2010 the company decides to change the schedule of deductions. It does this by making a variation on an approved form before lodging the first tax return to which the variation applies.

In terms of fulfilling a social contract the DGR process is very important, on a company balance sheet it represents a 12 per cent superior performance on simply evacuating assets to the market place. The DGR process not only returns a dividend to the balance sheet of the company it also contributes to its social contract with the local and regional economy.

Returns from Auctioning or Donating a Vehicle to a DGR Organisation
	Cash Sale at Auction	DGR Sale
Cash Return	$40,000	$40,000
Less Auction Costs	$4,000
SROI*		1200
Net Return	$36,000	$41,200

- * SROI = Social Return on Investment: External economic effect = 40,000 X .03 Regional Employment and Economic Indicator. (Note: .03 is a conservative multiplier for a remote community) In addition the company has provided an Indigenous business with a potential $40,000 asset against which it can leverage further funds.

One of the things that we have to encourage companies to do is to create a line in their annual reports which clearly demonstrates their social return on investment as part of renewing their social contract. Mining companies should be able to show a cash figure that they have returned as part of their social and economic contributions to the local economy.

Donating to DGR organisations is also three times as effective in terms of a company's annual balance sheet. If you make a donation to a non-dgr organisation chances are you may be able to claim this as a business expense and receive a 30 per cent deduction, however, through a DGR organisation, companies get a 100 per cent deduction.

Effect of Donation via non-DGR Process and DGR Process
	Non-DGR	DGR
Donation	$400	$400
Business Cost	-$400
Tax	30 per cent deductible	100 per cent deductible
Net Balance Sheet Effect	$120	$400

The ISX has identified 731 Indigenous organisations with DGR status. 24 in South Australia, 67 in Victoria, 126 in the Northern Territory, 181 in New South Wales, 12 in the ACT, 193 in Western Australia and 5 in Tasmania. (See Appendix) Aboriginal Mining Companies can have an enormous impact in their communities by donating any redundant equipment, services or direct cash donations to these organisations. The company that makes the donation receives the market value of the donation back as a tax deduction. Let us pause to just think about what this means.

The DGR process means that any taxpayer can make a direct impact with the tax that they pay every year. Instead of making a cash payment to the Federal Government and waiting for Kevin Rudd to allocate where it is spent, by making a Deductible Gift Payment or Donation, the company or individual is effectively bypassing Treasury, Government and the bureaucracy and saying this is where I want my tax to be allocated.

Let me give you an example, instead of going to an auction to sell a redundant grader, Ngarda Civil & Mining could donate that grader to Yandeyarra Station which has DGR status, and Ngarda would receive the full market price of that grader in their annual tax return and the community would have a much needed grader to maintain its roads.

I can't emphasise enough how important this process could be. We are all familiar with the $2 billion dollars allocated to Aboriginal Housing under SIHIP in the Northern Territory. After two years we are still waiting for the first hammer to be lifted. Contrast this with the DGR process, companies and taxpayers can take direct action to ensure that communities have the housing, equipment and much needed infrastructure that they need directly – no bureaucrats, no waiting, no committees. Deals can be done over a hand shake and the paper work is relatively easy and the whole process can be finished in a few weeks.

The other desirable feature of the DGR process is that it brings in a closer degree of accountability into the whole process. If Ngarda donates a grader to Yandeyarra community and the grader is trashed and not looked after, then the community won't have much hope of coming back to ask for for more equipment. Alternately if Ngarda donates a badly maintained grader to the community then Ngarda will be accountable. This is what I think is the basis of a real social contract between companies and communities. It creates a deep and meaningful direct relationship between mining companies and Indigenous communities.

However there are some problems with the DGR process and using it to ensure Indigenous businesses have the infrastructure and start up capacity they need.

- The first problem is that there is no one place that Australian businesses wanting to make donations can go to see the kind of equipment and support that Aboriginal DGR entities are looking for. *The ISX trading floor is being developed as a place where this can this can occur.
- The second problem is that not all States have been active in establishing Indigenous DGR entities. South Australia, Victoria and Tasmania have a very low ratio of Indigenous DGR entities. Also when you start to understand the different regions of Aboriginal Australia, even the Northern Territory and Western Australia have too few Indigenous entities listed in important Aboriginal communities. East Arnhem Land, for example, has only a handful of DGR entities and many of these do not have the constitutional authority to support economic enterprises. *The ISX is attempting to solve this problem. The ISX's parent company BAMA is a public benevolent enterprise which has a charter to work directly for the relief of poverty, sickness, suffering, distress, misfortune, disability or helplessness. We believe that the ISX and BAMA have the capacity to receive donations of equipment for Indigenous economic enterprises provided we can demonstrate that the formation of the business would result in the direct relief of poverty etc. The ISX trading floor also provides a particularly useful means of publicly accounting for those entities that receive cash, equipment or infrastructure through the DGR process. It is our requirement that before any entity can receive a DGR donation through BAMA it must be listed on the trading floor and clearly show how it will benefit its community.
- Third, the majority of DGR entities have a particular purpose and cannot make any donations available to just any Indigenous entrepreneurs or businesses that need them. Once again because the ISX's parent company charter is broad we believe that the ISX can play a role in solving this problem. Our view is that one of the single most important developments for Indigenous Australia is the creation of an independent and creative private sector.

- Fourth, the nature of the DGR process is such that it is an individual, often uncoordinated process that may not be directed at the most urgent problems of Indigenous Australia. *The ISX is encouraging companies and individuals to use their capacity to make donations to organisations on key problems and issues facing Indigenous communities. Our key priorities in 2010 are transport, food and grocery costs and homeland housing.
